OUR aim in publishing this book, has been to leave to the Class of 1903 something which will always be to them a pleasant remembrance of their school life in Abbot. And as all memory books, it deals with the lighter side of life, the pleasant experiences, and amusing incidents, rather than the academic work and intellectual growth. We have doubtless made many mistakes and we ask you to be charitable, and if there is any one to whom we have not given due credit, we beg you to excuse it. We wish to thank sincerely those members of the Faculty for the kindly assistance they have rendered us, and we wish also to thank all those who have in any way contributed to the publication of this book.

Senior Middle Year

RAND, hopeful, and joyous we began our career as Senior Middlers at Abbot Academy under the loving eye of Miss Gilbert, who knew well, as the president of '03 should know, how to lead a class. After business always should come fun, so she thought, and of course we all agreed, so on Tuesday night we went to her room and roasted marshmallows. Opportunities of all kinds were ahead of us, and we were not slow to seize them. The Seniors gave a reception, and we gave the play.

As we were young and happy we tried our hand at baseball; all the spring we worked, but sad to relate the Seniors won the day.

We ended our Senior Middle class meetings with a spread in Miss Parker's rooms. They were all decorated with our class color, red, and the light was red also, giving to the whole a most loyal effect.

As the end of school drew near and as the Class of '02 was to leave, we worked hard to make their last weeks pleasant. At the lawn party we ushered the best we knew how, and the next day our Middle year was at an end. On Tuesday, Miss Gilbert received the spade, thereby accepting for our class the responsibility of the following year.

Senior Year

As I write the history of the Senior year I am filled with awe at the wonderful nature of the class. Although we are small in number, we flatter ourselves that we make as much of our lives as the larger classes which have gone before us. There are always customs that must be kept, and it is always a good idea to establish new ones, so '03 thinks, but, for obvious reasons, we will only speak of the old ones. First, everyone knows that officers have to be elected, if there is to be any kind of an organization, and when it is the Class of '03, such an election is more than necessary, so we elected our officers, the same ones as the year before. Of course we were human and felt a little awed at our new responsibilities, and as for Psychology we had our fears at first. That was only natural, but who can have fear long, when the cause of it interests you, and takes your whole attention to itself, and leaves you no time for other things. As I say, we began to take an interest in things suggested by Prof. James, and as one of these things was human nature, we gave a reception, knowing that it is always good to see people on all sides, before passing judgment upon them. This reception was for the school and it was a great success. How could it help being successful when '03 gave it? But we must not forget the kindness of the Senior Middlers, because that would not be right after they were so good, and thank them now for their enjoyable play. It is the delight of every Abbot girl of the present time to have the old girls come back, and we take great pride in our famous members. So when Miss French came to Andover, Miss Means gave a reception to her, at which we Seniors assisted. It was a great pleasure to talk with her, for the charming way she expresses herself in her books was evident in her conversation.

Things that seem to be unimportant are sometimes VERY important, and it was so with the class meeting that was held a few weeks before Thanksgiving vacation. We will not go into the details of the class meeting, but will only mention the glorious class pin which was the result of our hard labor and thought.

One of the joys of the Seniors is the Abbot Club. There we meet the old girls of years past; and in February, when we ushered at a joint meeting of the Abbot Club and the Alumnae Association, we were thrown more with the old girls than at other meetings.

Most young people dislike lectures, but the Seniors would say, if asked, that they enjoy lectures greatly, when they are given by Prof. Griggs. We heard him three times in Lawrence, when he spoke on ethical subjects, and once in our own hall when he spoke of Leonardo de Vinci. Four more charming lectures we never heard.

Our year is fast coming to a close and it is with great sorrow I write of it. Hard as we work through these weeks we still have the sorrow of parting, which can't be shut out. We shall have our banquet the fifth of June, which will be one of our last meetings as a class. This year, our school days will end a day or two earlier, as we shall have the laying of the corner stone of the new building on our Class Day. We shall rejoice in the honor, but we all hate to see the day come that will send us out into the wide world.

May we, through our lives, show the world the great and good influence our Alma Mater has had upon us.

Tree Song

While the flowers are brightly beaming,
While the birds so sweetly sing,
While the glorious sun is gleaming,
Round our tree our voices ring.

Now, alas, our school days ended,
We, the class of nineteen-three,
Love and sorrow always blended,
Bless today our linden tree.

O, dear linden, may we love thee;
May we follow thee each day,
Reaching toward the blue above thee,
Struggle upward on our way.

Alma Mater, thee we're leaving:
Though our life with thee is past,
Pleasant memories yet are cleaving
Of the years that fled too fast.

Though tomorrow links must sever,
Still we'll love for thee retain;
Thy dear name we'll cherish ever,
True and loyal we'll remain.

Synopsis of the Play

Otto Lambert, professor in a University, engrossed in the study of Latin and Greek, has kept bachelor hall with the aid of Edmund and Thomas. He has little knowledge of society in general, or of women in particular, but he has just married his cousin, Pauline, in order to fulfill the conditions of their uncle's will. Pauline, for her part, has long loved the awkward, bashful professor. He brings his wife directly home, with no thought of the revolution in his bachelor ways which this step involves. Pauline's first task is to show him that there are other things in the world besides books.

Class Alphabet

A is for Abbot, the school we love best.
B is for Burnham, who'll stand every test.
C is for comfort we've had in this school.
D is for David, who ne'er breaks a rule.
E is for Ethics, we're glad it is o'er.
And F is for flunks we've all made galore.
G is for Gilbert, our president true.
And H is for Harvey and Hegeman, too.
I is the interest we have all shown
In James' Psychology, well it is known.
K is for kindness received through the year.
L is for literature, we all love so dear.
M is for Mason, well known in town.
N is for Nason, in logic renown.
O is for Room One, for the Seniors so wise.
P is for Packard and Parker, such sighs!
Q is the questions we all have to ask
When Reciting our Theism, a difficult task.
S is for serenades, now for us past.
T is for teachers, whom we love to the last.
U is for us who soon will depart.
V is for vacancy, left in our heart,
When we bid fair Abbot, alas, a farewell.
X, Y and Z for yourself you can tell.

Senior Complaints

I.

I wish I were unclassified,
And could play instead of grind.
I wish that conscience never spoke,
And I did not have a mind.

II.

I wish I never had to think
Of Mills and Kant and La Place.
I wish that Flint in his wondrous book
Would give such men less space.

III.

I wish that poets had said what they meant
In words that we might comprehend.
I wish that those whose essays we read
Some outlines condensed might send.

IV.

I wish that teachers did not expect
All Seniors to work and be saints.
I wish that they might thoughtful be
And heed these mournful complaints.

Field Day Songs

(TUNE, "HE RAMBLED")

Abbot, oh Abbot!
The Seniors are at play
And we will win the day,
Abbot, oh Abbot!
This is what the Seniors say today.

Hockey, 'tis hockey,
The ball's between the poles
And we have made the goals.
Hockey, 'tis hockey,
'Tis hockey that the Seniors play today.

Field Day, 'tis Field Day,
Ought-three and ought-five
Together we must strive
Field Day! 'tis Field day
The Seniors win in hockey game today.

(TUNE, "MRS. BROWN AND ME.")

'03 class is a wonder
They have so many sharks —
They're so very brilliant
You can almost see the sparks,
They are only nine young damsels
In this favored class '03,
But they're enough I'm sure that you
Will all agree with me.

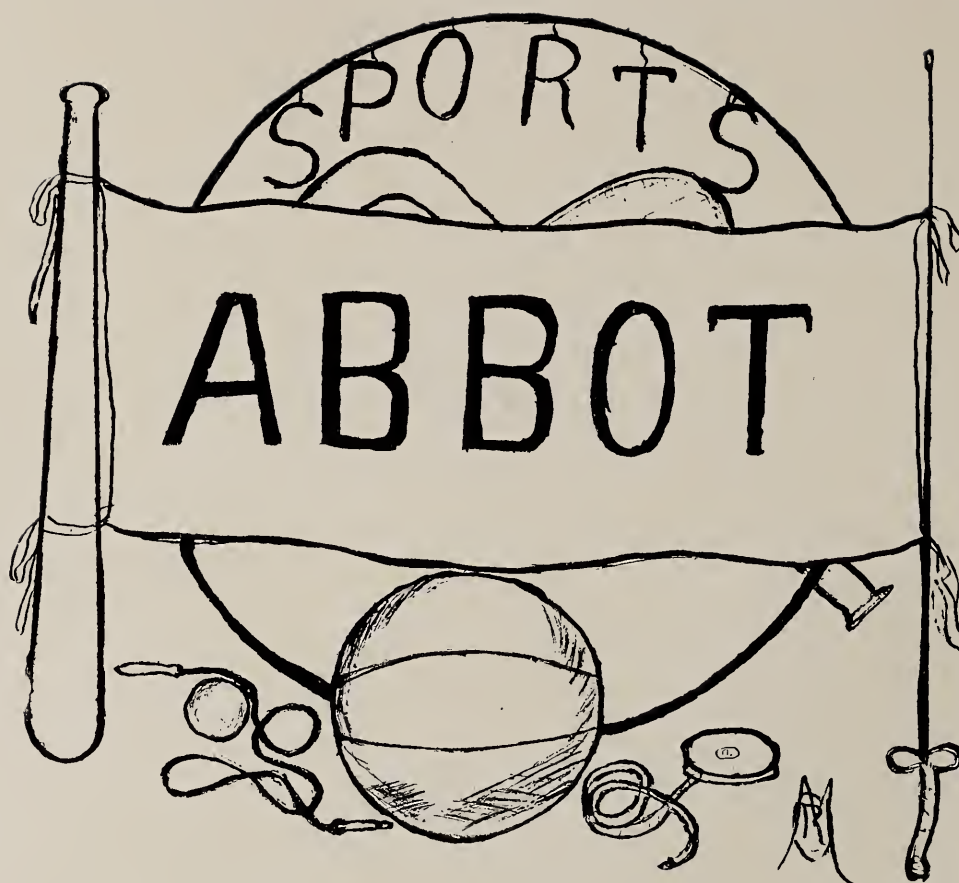

Oh, class '03! Clever class '03!
Our sympathies are with you.
So you can count on me —
If you think that we can help
This day by points to win,
We will hurdle, dash or fast walk for '03.— M. M. G.

(TUNE, "YE HO! LITTLE GIRLS, YE HO!")

Three cheers for the Senior team
You'll find we are all we seem,
For our team's all right and it can't go wrong
And we'll show today that our class is strong.
Watch the ball go flying between the seniors' poles!
We know how to play, we'll soon win the day,
Three cheers for the Senior goals.

(TUNE, "AFTER THE BALL")

After our school days are over,
After these days have fled;
When we from this class have parted,
The class of the glorious red —
We'll always remember dear Abbot
And Senior Mids we'll think of thee,
For we'll remember when we were the same
The class of nineteen-three.

The Bradford Game

Do you want to hear the story,
How the Fem Sems won renown
At a game of basket ball,
In our good old Andover town?

The grass was soft and green,
The sky above was blue,
And all the girls were cheering
When the Bradfords came in view.

The month it was November,
The day of the month was ten.
Each team was self-reliant
And trusted its own men.

The Bradford girls played nobly
But they could not win the game;
While all the pretty cheering staff
Did urge our girls to fame.

Helen Abbott played at center,
While Elinor and Beth Cole
Helped Anne, who showed her spirits
By putting the ball into the goal,

The Phillips boys were very kind
When they cheered our herces too,
And we were about the proudest girls.
That Andover ever knew.

That night a weird and ghostly throng
Around the circle went,
Each girl a candle bearing
All were happy and content.— M. M. Good

Fragrant honey smelled like thyme.

Latin IV

HEARD IN CLASS

Miss C. What does this mean? "And they take away the sheaf from the hungry?"

H. Nason. They carry away the hungry sheep.

Moral: Pay attention.

WESTERN IGNORANCE

M. Cooper, passing the Boston Public Library,

"Is that the Stock Exchange?"

NAME	LEAVE	TAKE

Three cheers for the Senior team,
You'll find us all we seem.
For our team's all right and it can't go wrong,
And we'll show today that our class is strong,
Watch the ball go flying between the Seniors' poles,
We know how to play, we'll soon have the day,
Three cheers for the Senior goals.
